TABLEWARE

NATALIA CRIADO
Tea Set

FORGET FRUMPY PORCELAIN. This silver-plated-brass tea set from industrial designer Natalia Criado is the perfect contemporary take on a traditional pastime. Born in Colombia, Criado earned a degree in Milan and imbues her work with influences from both places, prioritizing collaboration with artisans and embracing inspiration from pre-Columbian history and culture. Each piece in this collection includes a stone adornment—as a lid-opener or handle—that transforms utilitarian objects into jewelry for your table. From $750

DMITRIY & CO
Amarn Daybed

THE AMARN DAYBED'S sleek silhouette is proof that furniture can be sexy. Handcrafted in Los Angeles by Dmitriy & Co, this pleasingly symmetrical minimalist's dream is akin to a brutalist sculpture—little else is needed to decorate the space where it lands. Perfect for those who want a unique piece, the Amarn is available in a range of lengths and wood-frame finishes, with the customer providing their choice of material for upholstery. From $13,500

TABLE

KONEKT
Silo Console Table

TAKING INSPIRATION FROM an unusual source—the industrial grain silo—New York design studio Konekt released this console with flexibility in mind. Crafted from wood and brass (or stainless steel), the piece is available with optional hollow magnetic domes. Pop them off to reveal circular inlays perfect for holding a small basket or tray where daily bric-a-brac can accumulate, or keep them attached (our preference) for a truly striking architectural statement. $15,100
